Q. Hope Jones On Hard Cider

He Lectures on Its Lamentable Effects to the Citizens of Locust Valley and Plods Along to the Next Town.

CITIZENS of Locust Valley—I reached this charming and picturesque little town on foot some time after midnight last night, and there was no committee to extend the glad hand and no band to tout a welcome. It even took me half an hour to arouse the landlord of your somewhat somnolent hostelry and convince him that my cash capital was equal to a humble bed and two or three following meals. I bear no malice, however, and if my sensitive feelings were hurt at the moment they have been soothed since by the uniform good will evinced by all classes of citizens toward me.

"I am here among you to speak on a matter closely concerning your physical and moral welfare. I may say that it concerns your present happiness and your future state of bliss. I am no temperance fanatic who would burst in all the doors of all the breweries and smash in all the doors of all the saloons, but I have a few words to say to you about one invidious drink in particular.

"It is not old rye whisky, which has slain its hundreds of thousands and caged the knees of millions more to wobble; it is not the brandy which leaves a thirst three feet long down the neck behind it; it is not that brand of lager beer which causes brother to strike brother and sister to pull sister's hair. It is that sleek, sly, artful and invidious beverage known as hard cider. You will be surprised, as others have been, to hear that it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder, but wait until you hear what I have to say.

"Let me draw you an everyday picture—a picture to be met with at thousands of firesides every evening in the week—and I trust that some few of you at least will be affected to tears. If so, I shall be somewhat consoled as an offset to the fact that the receipts of the house this evening are only 40 cents in cash.

"The farmer's toll for the day is o'er. His beasts of burden have gone to their feed and rest, and he has finished his supper and sat down to look over the family almanac and see when the next full moon is due. His wife takes up her knitting, his son retires to the garret to scrape the fiddle, and the cat stretches out on the hearth rug and is glad that she is still alive. It is a quiet, peaceful scene, and the most cold blooded villain could not look upon it without remembering the mother who used to pat him on the head and predict that he would some day be a preacher.

"Suddenly the gray haired farmer, who has seen fifty years come and go, begins to hitch around as if he had absently sat down on a hornet's nest. He drops the almanac; he becomes careless as to the new moon; a thirst begins to rise up from his toes and make his ears tingle. His good wife gives him a glance of reproach, and he hesitates for five minutes longer. Then he rises up and remarks that he will step down cellar for a minute to see if the potato bugs are comfortable, and he passes out of the room, gets a four quart pitcher from the kitchen and is soon kneeling before the barrel of hard cider down cellar.

"Alas, we all know, what follows! The spigot is turned, the Satanic drink gurgles out, and the brimming pitcher is carried upstairs and its contents quaffed with chuckles of satisfaction between every swallow.

"Tempted by the sight and smell, the farmer's wife gradually yields and at length downs a glass and asks for two or three more. The son with the fiddle has an intuition that there is hilarity going on downstairs, and he ceases to scrape the walling strings and descends to claim his share.

"That quiet, peaceful picture of half an hour ago is turned into a wild revel. Youth forgets itself—old age becomes reckless. The pitcher is empty only to be promptly refilled, and when eight or ten quarts have been disposed of Satan himself enters the room to make the fourth person present.

"He tempts the old farmer to charge his wife with wearing out two pairs of shoes in the last three years and to twit her of a fiendish desire to send him to the poorhouse. She retorts by charging him with stinginess and parsimony, and they are soon calling each other liars and horse thieves.

"Then the son takes a hand in. He has never been to a circus or a Fourth of July celebration. He has simply been kept boozing corn from January to December without a break to go fishing or see a balloon ascension. He was permitted to buy a fiddle and scrape on it solely in hopes that he might drive the mice and rats out of the house. Under the excitement of drink he now demands $14 per month and board and washing as a hired man, and, failing to get it, he will run away and become a cowboy or a pirate. Even if he gets it he wants a Saturday holiday and every Sunday evening to go and spark his girl.

"My dear friends, must I tell you what follows? I feel that I must, but it is with an aching heart, and such of you as are overcome by your feelings and are obliged to go out doors to get your breath back will be excused for the same.

"That hard cider has got in its fiendish work. The son forgets that he is a son—the father and mother that they are parent and husband and wife. They jaw, they wrangle, they call names, they shake their fists under each other's nose, and Satan stands there and smiles and urges them on.

"Suddenly the wife and mother makes a grab for her husband's gray locks, and the scrap is on. There are kicking and biting and hair pulling between the three for a few minutes, and then they separate for more murderous work. The wife remembers that the butcher knife is lying on the kitchen table where she left it after slicing the pork for breakfast. The father remembers that the newly sharpened ax is at the door, and the son brought the family crowbar downstairs with him when he came, thinking it might be required to poke the fire. Two minutes later all are armed and dashing into the conflict, and there is a ha, ha, ha! from Satan as the sharp steel cuts and the crowbar bruises.

"Let us skip over a period of fifteen minutes. The cat, who has lost her tail from a blow of the ax, is looking around and wondering where it went. Satan has seen his work completed there and has passed on to repeat it at Farmer Jones'. The father lies here, the mother over there, the son against the front door. All are dead. It is needless to say that none of them died of consumption or typhoid fever. Upstairs there is a spectacle to make a rhinoceros shed tears; down cellar that barrel of hard cider is still gurgling and chucking and waiting for fresh victims. It is not satisfied with the three deaths, but is lying low for the hired man when he comes home from sparring his Sarah Jane.

"I have presented you with a terrible picture, but it is one drawn from life and can be depended on. Barrels of hard cider are snuggled away in hundreds of thousands of cellars, and each and every one of them is awaiting its victims.

"Satan is going around the country disguised as Uncle Rube and calling at every house as he goes. You need not go to the saloons and breweries of the towns to plant murder in your hearts and bring tragedy into the family circle. You have simply to go down cellar and turn the spigot of that cider barrel. The insidious beverage will do the rest.

"There is sorrow in lager beer, grief in claret, misfortune in old rye and tragedy in cognac, but when the hard cider gurgles look out for Satan and murder.

"If you feel that you must have something besides good well water, and root beer fails to relieve that tired feeling, then turn to buttermilk. It never changes. As it was in the days of the prophets so it is now. It soothes in the morning, comforts in the afternoon and lies down like a lamb at night. It may not increase the yield of buckwheat on the farm, but it will keep peace in the family and leave the cat to carry her full length of tail until old age and a natural death overtake her.

"My friends, I am done. I have given you 80 cents' worth of lecture for half that sum, and as the distance to my next town is thirteen miles I have got to get an early start to be there in time for breakfast and to post my bills.

"If I have given you newer and higher ideas, I rejoice. If I have failed to convince you that it is your duty on going home tonight to roll your barrels of hard cider out where the cows and calves can have a fair show at them, then I am sorry and tender my humble apologies for taking up an evening which might have been spent in sorting over potatoes or playing checkers."

When they fail to do this the kidneys are sick.

Backache and kidney ills follow. Urinary trouble, diabetes.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure the mal.

J. Blake, whose place of residence is 525 Market street, Portland, says: "I bought several boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and I scarcely think if the first had not proved satisfactory that I would have tried the second and third. I have used almost everything said to be a cure for weakened kidneys and bladder but nothing ever gave me the satisfaction I received from Doan's Kidney Pills. They are easy to take, have no effect upon the stomach or bowels and act directly upon the kidneys. I thoroughly believe from the results I received and also from observation that Doan's Kidney Pills are one preparation on the market which acts directly as represented."

Huge Task

It was a huge task to undertake the cure of such a bad case of kidney disease as that of C. F. Collier, of Cherokee, Ia., but Electric Bitters did it. He writes: "My kidneys were so far gone I could not sit on a chair without a cushion; and suffered from dreadful backache, headache and depression. In Electric Bitters, however, I found a cure and by them was restored to perfect health. I recommend the great tonic medicine to all with weak kidneys, liver or stomach. Guaranteed by C. Rogers, druggist. Price, 50 cents."

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE

Cures Kidney and Bladder Diseases in Every Form—Many People Have Kidney Trouble and Do Not Know It.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

It is the function of the kidneys to filter and purify the blood which is constantly passing through them.

When the kidneys are out of order the other organs are affected immediately and you may have symptoms of heart trouble, stomach and liver trouble, and other ailments, which are all owing to the kidneys being weak and out of order.

If you are sick Foley's Kidney Cure will strengthen and build up the worn out tissues of the kidneys so they will act properly and the symptoms of weakness, heart, stomach and liver trouble will disappear and you will be restored to perfect health.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

You can easily determine if your kidneys are out of order by setting aside for 24 hours a bottle of the urine passed upon arising. If upon examination it is cloudy or milky or has a brick-dust sediment or small particles float about in it, your kidneys are diseased and Foley's Kidney Cure should be taken at once. Foley's Kidney Cure is pleasant to take and acts directly upon the parts affected and you begin to feel better at once.

It corrects slight disorders in a few days and it has cured many obstinate cases after other treatment had failed.

Doctors Said He Would Not Live.

Peter Frey, of Woodruff, Pa., writes: "After doctoring for two years with the best physicians in Waynesburg, and still getting worse, the doctors advised me if I had any business to attend to I had better attend to it at once, as I could not possibly live another month, as there was no cure for me. Foley's Kidney Cure was recommended to me by a friend, and I immediately sent my son to the store for it and after taking three bottles I began to get better and continued to improve until I was entirely well."

Two Sizes, 50c and $1.00.

CHAS. ROGERS, Druggist.

NATURE SPARES

The Stricken Rose From Grief. What a fortunate provision of nature it is, that deprives the rose of mental suffering; for how poignant would be its grief to discover, in the height of its blooming glory, that a canker fed at its heart, and that its beauty and fragrance were doomed forever. Nature always spares the suffering; she is a veritable store-house of pleasing rewards, for those who seek her aid. In the years gone by falling hair and grayness have cast a gloom over the lives of thousands of young women, but thanks to the investigations of scientists the true cause of hair destruction is now known to be a germ or parasite that burrows into the hair follicles. Newbro's Herpicide absolutely destroys this germ, thus permitting the hair to grow as nature intended. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. Eagle Drug Store, 351-353 Bond St., Owl Drug Store, 540 Com. St., T. F. Laurin, Prop. "Special Agent."
